What it's about

Many learners (and some teachers) believe that learning the grammatical patterns and lexis of a language requires many hours of hard work. While there is undoubtedly truth in this belief, the question remains: how effective and memorable is learning if it requires arduous toil and nothing more?

This eight-hour course offers participant teachers a variety of techniques, approaches, materials and activities based on the premise that learning becomes more effective and memorable when learners can encounter, notice, process and use grammar and vocabulary in creative and personally meaningful ways.

Research evidence provides support that creative learning activities not only motivate learners but also have a significant motivating effect on teachers.

During the sessions teachers will have the opportunity to experience and experiment with the template materials and activities demonstrated, and to create their own materials using the templates.

The course will be delivered in 4 x 120-minute synchronous sessions.
